Frequently Asked Questions

1. Will the responding person know my identity?

Yes, if the college determines there is reasonable cause to believe a violation has occurred and investigates the matter. The responding party has the right to know the identity of the reporting party.

2. Do I need to name the responding person?

Yes, if you want formal disciplinary action to be taken against the responding party. You can report the incident without the identity of the responding party, but doing so may limit the college's ability to respond comprehensively.

3. Does information about the report remain private?

The privacy of all parties is respected, except when it interferes with the college's obligation to fully investigate allegations of sexual misconduct.

4. How is a report of sexual misconduct decided?

The college investigates allegations of sex/gender based harassment, discrimination or misconduct to determine whether there is evidence to indicate a policy violation is "more likely than not." This standard, called the preponderance of the evidence, correspond to an amount of evidence indicating a policy violation is more than 50% likely to have occurred.
